U.S. Believes Russia Readies Long-Range Missile for Subs

By William Beecher

The Soviet Union appears to be nearing the successful end of tests of a new long-range submarine-based missile and may deploy the weapon next year, according to Pentagon analysts. The missile, dubbed the Sawfly by Western analysts, has a range of up to 3,500 miles, approximately twice that of the best operational Soviet submarine missile. The U.S. submarine-launched missile with the longest range, tha Poseidon, can travel about 3.000 miles.

Analysts say there have been about 15 tests of the Sawfly since mid-1969, with a flurry of firings this fall. All but four of the tests were successful, sources say, and the failures came early in the program.

Most analysts believe the new missile will initially be carried by one of two Soviet submarine types, either the H-class or the Y-class. Later, it is expected to be carried by a submarine designed especially for it. Earlier this week, the Defense Department awarded a contract to Lockheed Aircraft to develop a new long-range submarine missile. Unofficial estimates are that this weapon will have a range of about 4,000 miles. It will not be available for several years.

The importance of range in this context, analysts explained, is that the greater the range, the larger

Heikal Sees Crisis Among Guerrillas In Murder of Tell

CAIRO, Dec. 3 (NYT).-The assassination of Jordan's Premier Wasti Tell last Sunday by four assailants identified as Palestinians was described today by Cairo's leading editor, Moham-med Hassanein Helical, as evidence of a "crisis" within the Palestinian guerrilla movement.

"When a revolutionary movement deviates to the path of individual assassination, this is an indication of a defect in the structure of the revolution," Mr. Heikal wrote in his weekly colimn in Al Ahram.

The shooting of Premier Tell. Mr. Heikal continued, reflected "anger and alienation" of young Palestinians thwarted in their struggle against Israel.

Jordan's drive to curb the guerrillas, he said, followed errors by the Palestinians of overconfidence, exaggerations of their anti-Israel forays and "grave excesses" -evidently an allusion to the hijacking of four international airliners to Jordan in September,

Mr. Helkal recommended a toplevel Palestinian conference for "soul-searching and assessment" of the role of the guerrillas in the conflict with Israel

Soviet Demand Seen Snag at SALT

VIENNA, Dec. 3 (UPI).—The Soviet Union is insisting that any treaty at the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks limit enti-ballistic missiles to rings around Moscow and Washington, diplomatic sources said today. The sources said the United

GENEVA, Dec. 3 (NYT).— Robert L. Vesco, head of the Investors Overseas Services mutual fund group, will retire at the end of the month as a director of the Overseas Development Bank of Geneva at the request of the Swiss Banking Commission, a member of the commission said

Emile Duperrex of the banking commission said that at its request Milton F. Melssner, president of IOS, Ltd., the group's parent company, was also retir-ing from the bank's board at the same time.

Mr. Vesco, who is chairman and chief executive officer of the Geneva-based but Canadian-registered IOS, is free on $125,000 bail after a Geneva court con-firmed on Wednesday his arrest on a charge of wrongfully dis-charging his responsibilities as a bank director.

Lower Ball Set

Mr. Meissner, who was arrested Tuesday with Mr. Vesco on the same charge, was released in $25,000 ball, as was a third director of the bank, Ulrich Strickler.

Mr. Messner and Mr. Vesco, 35, are Americans and Mr. Strickler

Mr. Duperrex confirmed in a telephone interview today a report in a Geneva newspaper quoting him as having said that the commission asked in October that the two Americans resign from the board of the bank, then a wholly owned IOS subsidiery.

The commissioner said that Mr. Vesco and Mr. Meissner had acceded quickly, making their resignations effective at the end of the year.

The complaint that led to their arrest was filed in July hy a alleged that IOS shares he had deposited with the bank as collateral on a loan had been irregularly sold to a subsidiary of International Controls Co. of New Jersey, which Mr. Vesco heads. He was engaged then in a proxy fight to retain control of IOS. In October, IOS announced the salc of the Geneva bank along with other banking interests to that any ABM agreement be linked with "certain measures" to-ward offensive limitations. The cources said the two nations have reached broad agreement that this should be a temporary freeze on offensive missile deployment, to give SALT negotiators time to tackle the immensity complex field of individual offensive weap-

The Soviet ABM proposal, the cources said, envisages 100 ABMs around Moscow and Washington. The American proposal suggests that the United States be left with more ABMs than Russia because it has to protect at least two ICBM bases. Russin was said to oppose this and a compromise was considered likely.

Another area of disagreement, according to the sources, was the Soviet euggestion that an ABM treaty not only set numerical ceilings but also ban development and testing of ABM warheads. The United States was said to oppose this, on grounds that development is almost impossible to police and is not eo destabilizing as the actual deployment of missiles themselves.

The disagreement on location of ABMs was believed to be the most serious one facing the negotiators, since it involved a clash between the two basic strategies of nuclear deterrence - "firststrike" versus "second-strike." To rely on a "first-strike" posture-implied by the positioning of ABM rings around capital cities without protecting ICBMs-implies a belief that the other nation will not attack first.

Kosygin May Cut Short Trip Due to Indian-Pakistani Clash

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 3 (AP). -Danish sources tonight said the explosive situation on the Indian-Pakistani borders may force Soviet Premier Alexel N. Kosygin to cut short his official visit here and return home tomorrow.

The sources said the latest news of escalating clashes between Indian and Pakistani troops was causing deep worry in the Soviet leader's delegation.

In private talks yesterday, Mr. Kosygin told Danish Premier Jens Otto Krag that he was very pessimistic about the situation and his government would everything to prevent war.

There was no official word from the Soviet delegation, but Danish sources indicated that Mr. Kosygin might decide to end his visit here tomorrow and fly back to Moscow after final talks with Mr. Krag at the latter's vacation retreat in northern Jutland.

Mr. Kosygin's original schedule calls for him to proceed to Norway for a similar official visit Sunday.

The Danish national news agency tonight quoted Mr. Kosygin as remarking that "hidden forces are putting oil on the fire" in the conflict. The Soviet leader was said to have made this remark to Danish and Soviet delegation members when informed about the latest military developments. The remark was generally taken to refer to China.

Italy Police Take Fake Champagne Off Shop Shelves

ROME, Dec. 3 (AP),—Police to-day confiscated thousands of bottles of fake champagne and mislabeled wine on sale at high prices all over the country for the Christmas holidays. At least 18 persons were charged with fraud. The police, from a special branch of the Health Ministry, took the bottles off shelves and out of warehouses in cities from Turin in the north to Palermo in the south.

In a single storeroom near Brescla, police found 18,000 bottles labeled as an expensive French champagne, but the con-tants turned out to be some as yet unidentified alcoholic beverage. Investigators also found 300,000 bottle labels in the same place. A shopkeeper in Bergamo and 17 other persons were charged with making fake champagne and selling wines with false labels. Police said wines worth no more than 200 lire, or 32 cents, a bottle were sold for ten times that

The protocol was signed by Andrew Gibson, the U.S. assistant secretary of marithme affairs, and I.M. Averin, head of the Foreign Relations Department of the So-viet Maritime Ministry.

The Soviet Union signed a protocol with Belgium and Luxembourg yesterday on cooperation in the chemical, electrical engineering and food industries, Tass reported today.

The document followed this week's meeting here of the intergovernmental commission for econemic, scientific and technical cooperation formed two years ago by this country and the Belgium-Luxembourg economic union.

Form and Line

French elegance is all-inclusive as a cigarette lighter and turn it into an ornament of pure form and line set off only by surface

That is, it can when Cartier goes about making lighters, and it is by no means all surface elegance, for every one is guaranteed to function perfectly for life at Cartier's expe

This slim object is a delight to hold in the hand and admire, for absolutely nothing breaks its line, although within it contains 87 moving parts machined to incredibly fine tolerances, from 8 to 1/10,000ths of an inch, the whole protected by seven different patents. It is not surprising that such a perfectly turned-out gas lighter should begin at more than $70 in its simplest, silver-plated form and it can reach nearly $4,000 once Cartier has finished with it as a sparkling, diamond-covered piece of jewelry. $700 will do it for a solid gold model.

The price always includes a year's supply of gas and flints. If anything goes wrong with a Cartier lighter, not only will it be fixed or replaced rapidly (one week maximum, at the workshop) at no cost, but even if it is dropped and broken, the necessary repairs are made at minimal

Perfect Marriage

Cartier's magnificent lighter is not just international because of the appeal of having the finest lighter made, but quite literally 80 percent of the production is exported to some 50 countries. That still leaves a lot for France. but even so they may be purchased in only 200 or so prestige outlets here. They are present in just about every duty-free shop of the world.

Cartier's perfect marriage of technology and the traditions of elegance is a recent achievement that hopefully augurs well for the world. But it was not always so easy to have fire with an almost instinctive flick of the Fire was once so sacred that it took Prometheus to steal it from the gods of Olympus before man might use this magie gift. Even then he had to rub sticks together or strike metal and flint and then blow the tiny smoldering bits of punk into live flame.

Fire was also one of the four ancient elements of Aristotle together with carth, air and water, but it was not all that easy to come by. People who were so careless as to let their hearth go out had to borrow coals from their neighbor, which was a lot easier than starting—quite literally-from scratch

Eventually tinderboxes, precursors of the modern flint lighter, became common household gadgets. Often these were made in the form of a flintlock pistol, with a box full of punk to catch the sparks where the pan and barrel of the pistol would have

Cartier has gathered together a remarkable collection of such lighters from all periods and places. The earliest is a weighted stick with a bow to turn it rapidly in a depression in another piece of wood and thereby generate enough friction to set the touchwood smoldering.

Inventive Lighters

This and other pieces from Tibet (a simple blade with an attached pouch for holding the flint and punk), Japan (an encased flintlock lighter) and other parts of the world were recently shown in Paris and at the Florence Biennial Antiques Fair.

Some of the lighters from the early 19th century began to use recent chemical knowledge to create bulky gas and sulphur lighters that were probably as capable of exploding as they were of lighting effectively.

A prehistoric wooden piston lighter used in Indonesia was no doubt far more effective. A piston with a hollow tip to hold the punk was introduced into a hollow cylinder with just enough tolerance to let the piston slide easily. If the piston was rammed down sharply the compression of the air in the cylinder generated enough heat to set the punk in the piston flaming. Naturally, matches became serious contenders with lighters for efficiency, simplicity and especially cost, but today it would seem that the long-lasting liquid gas lighter, lit at the flick of a thumb, has the edge everywhere except in cost, which has in any case become minimal with throw-away

The one thing that matches can never do, however, is to offer compact efficiency combined with the sort of refinement, elegance and luxury for which Cartier lighters have become famous. The newest-born in the line is already a password for necessary luxury in the world after only two and a half years, which is a striking achievement, if the match industry will forgive the

International Symbol

Scotch whisky is one of the most. obvious symbols of internationalism, but it has not always been so. Until the end of the last century it was so much a local drink that not even the English took much notice of it.

In 1885, Thomas Dewar saw no reason why his firm's fine whisky, produced at Perth for the previous 40 years by his father, John, founder of the company, should not appeal to that benighted nation south of Scotland, and bring to the poor English the same warmth and comfort which armed the Scots against the cold winter

No one thought that he would ever get far against the Englishmen's native gin and imported cognac, but 15 years later he was sheriff of London and the next year received a knighthood and was elected to Parliament. No doubt out of sheer gratitude for the introduction of White Label to England

Today Dewar's White Label is second throughout the world in sales of Scotch, third in the United States and rising fast in France, which 10 years ago looked down its nose upon this upstart liquor.

France is now second in the world in imports of Scotch whisky, after the United States, which says a lot about the quality of a product that can compete successfully without advertising (forbidden in France) against the formidable local produce.

No doubt Dewar's association with the luxury distribution firm of Crovetto has helped trend, and yet Crovetto also deals in many other fine liquors such as Diez ports, Princes de Cognac extra-old cognac, Punt e Mes and Carpano vermouth, and more direct competitors: Ancient Age bourbon and Irish Mist liqueur, all of which can be done up in Christmas gift

But Crovetto is proud of its exclusive distribution rights in France of White Label and Ancestor, Dewar's rich, mellow, 12-year-old Scotch. Dewar's is a high-quality blended whisky whose style never varies, for up to 40 different Scotch whiskles both malt and grain, go into it to keep the quality constant. And though the quantities are vast today, Dewar's is still as carefully produced and aged as ever. Nothing can replace the peat-stoked malt-drying kilns that give malt whisky its distinctive flavor, or the purity of the water from Scottish streams that goes into the mash. And only slow aging in oak casks can properly mellow Scotch whisky. Thus it is that Dewar's also represents a victory of the modern world, properly marrying technology, mechanization and automation where possible while retaining all the painstaking skill of the artisan. And there's a famous Scottish victory over the English!

Precious Gems

And then there is that luxury of ancient times that is with us as much as ever—the art of great jewelry made of the earth's most rare and precious gems. The house of Gérard is new, not quite three years old, although Monsleur Gérard himself has been years. There is already a branch at Monte-Carlo and another due to open at Lausanne next Feb-

But the youth of the house is no measure of the quality of the stones used, of their near priceless rarity. Not very many jewelers can boast of a magnificent 100-carat cabochon sapphire in a necklace-pendantearring set composed of dozens of lesser sapphires and scores of diamonds.

Or of a bracelet set with alternating matched diamonds and pigeon's-blood rubles of such perfection that the price of this object alone is more than $800. 000. The pleasure of buying this level of gem perfection as a gift to a woman worthy to wear it is reserved to the man who has attained the summit and can permit himself this luxury once reserved only to the greatest lords and monarchs of the mightiest realms. And yet this luxury is also one of the strongest investments possible, for gems are becoming rarer and rarer, especially rubles. It takes years to collect the sort of sets available at Gérard, to have enough matching stones of perfect quality to make a generous necklace, bracelet or even earrings when these consist of two identical large tear-drop sapphires. Every stone used by Monsieur Gérard carries its government certificate of purity and this, perhaps, led him to establish the Bourse du Brillant (Diamond Exchange) in Paris two and a half years ago.

Perfect "specimen" cut bluewhite diamonds can be bought and sold, as is gold or any other commodity, with the additional attraction of a one-year guarantee to buy back the diamond at its original purchase quotation, minus a commission of 4.9 percent.

The daily quotations are listed at Gerard and carried weekly by Le Figaro, but so a the guarantee has been useless. The price of a one-carat diamond on opening day, April 14, 1969, was at about 17,000 francs, another perfect example of combining business with pleasure, which ought to be the goal and achievement of every successful inter-

The Art of Paul Strand

By Hilton Kramer

PHILADELPHIA (NYT).-Paul Strand is one of the legendary names in the history of American photography. His early accomplishments reach back to the era of Alfred Stleglitz, in whose gallery "291" Mr. Strand first showed his work in 1916. mous ocuvre. At the age of 81, he shows no sign of relaxing his energetic course.

So devoted has he remained to producing new work-in recent years his photographic missions have taken him to Ghana, Morocco and Romania-that it has proved difficult to organize a retrospective survey of his whole career. But now at last this prodigious task has been undertaken by Michael Hoffman, pub-

a vital photographic artist, tire-lessly adding to his already enor-also acts as photographic adviser also acts as photographic adviser to the Philadelphia Museum of Art. Working closely with Mr. Strand, Mr. Hoffman has organized an exhibition of nearly 500 prints ranging from 1915 to 1968. It opened last week at the Philadelphia Museum of Art, and will travel later to museums in St. Louis, Boston, New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

It is a beautiful show-a very large show that does justice to a very large accomplishment. The development it traces is the development of an artist who first immersed himself in a very selfconscious and programmatic aestheticism in order to discover the expressive strengths of his medium, and then progressively emancipated himself from the limitations of this aestheticism in order to deal faithfully with the strength of his subjects.

In the early photographs, which include views of New York life as well as "abstract" pictures of machines and commonplace objects, we are offered a world of modernist forms—patterns of light and shadow that consciously evoke the forms of postimpres-sionist and cubist painting. Even in many of these early pictures. there is a strong element of sympathetic identification with the subject matter, but the overriding impulse is toward sesthetic refinement. The result is a for-mal purity that is still breath-taking, but the kind of purity that remains deeply indebted to a period taste. We feel photography lingering in the shadow of the great modern painters.

In the later photographs-from the early 1930s onward—this formal element has ceased to be a program and has become instead something like an instinct. It serves the photographer's sub-jects; it no longer dominates them. The style is no less pure. but purity is no longer its objec-tive. Aestheticism gives way to an extraordinary empathy-a robust realism that has fully aselmilated the lessons of modern ing oneself with youth. Leaving aside the pleasant, cosy, amateurish atmorphere that Binoche's uninhibited style creates, this sale has been remarkably well organized. In prepara-tion for it, his assistant, Marie-Claude Tubiana, spent two months in the United States, poring through reference books and art magazines, attending exhibitions, meeting museum direc-tors and visiting artists, inspecting recent acquisitions in museums from New York to Los

Argeles. Such methods are totally new on the French suction market. The highest compliment thus far paid to Binoche is that others are following in his footsteps. Sims, Le Point Cardinal, 3 Rue Jacob, Paris-Se, to Jan. 31. The paintings of Sima, who died only six months ago, present the viewer with a sensitive, nontalgic, somber and quasi-mystic space of delicate and luminously nebulous color—a subjective space cometimes precisely but delicately marked off with a mental scaffolding of lines. They have something rational about their structure, but it is a rationality governed by tact and sensibility. This interrelationship of thought and feeling in a single intuitive vision, opening on the adventure of perception and consciousness, contributes to the specific quality of Sima's work, its faraway tenderness and its untyraunical

Arman, Galerie Michel Couturier, 22 Rue de Seine, Paris-6e, to Dec. 31_

Arman takes a grand plane and grinds it to pieces, he then gathers the wreckage and fixes it to a framed surface. Next Arman takes a violin and (apparently) dips it in black paint and vigorously swats his canvas. The violin is then partly burned and ultimately dunked in transparent plastic. Finally (for this installment) Arman grabs a cello and runs it five or six times through a circular saw. The pieces he then mounts and frames. These and other works are here on view.

The second second Sulpice, Paris-6c, to Dec. 18.

This exhibition includes both sculptures and tapestries by Gilioli. The very simplified forms of the sculptures show the artist's Brancusi. The tapestries are handsome, often colorful and warm, and generally composed of well-defined areas of color.

Arroyo, Galerie 9, 9 Rue des Beaux-Arts, Paris-6e, to Dec. 15. The graphic works of Eduardo Arroyo occasionally have a slapdash authority and a satirical purpose. At other times they are if they ought overcarefully handled, as though

There is often an undercurrent of rather bitter sarcasn using the language of the comic book or the small-town cinema poster. Some of the works show the costumes he designed for a German production of "Wozzek."

> Bahunek, Galerie Mona Lisa, 32 Rue de Varenne, Paris-7e, to Dec. 31.

This naif painter from Yugoalavia is described in the catalogue as a Sunday-Seurat. His pointillist landscapes show impeccable trees stylized into sponge-like forms and glowing in unreal colors: yellow, lilac and blue as well as green. There is a certain mythical force here but he tends to be very repetitive.

The quality of greatness discerned by some in the work of the late Peter Lanyon has, except in a few of his last canvases, escaped me. In this I differ from, for example, Andrew Causey, lecturer in art history at St. Martin's School of Art, who considers Lanyon a key figure in English art history from 1945 to his death in a gliding accident in 1964.

This show celebrates the pubtifully-produced book about Lan-yon ("Peter Lanyon," Aidan Ellis Publishing Ltd., £9). It is paintings, drawings, gouaches constructions. paintings were abstracted from searcast landscape—"The kernel of Lanyon's creative myth," Prof. Causey writes, "(was) the point where land and water meet." Seedy Splendor, Grotesque Ritual in 'The Balcony'

premiere in London in 1957, audiences can see Jean Genet's
"The Balcony" without being a member of a theater club, a hlessing conferred by the ending of the Lord Chancellor's indicrous powers of stage censorship.

The Royal Shakespeare Com-pany's production at the Aldwych Theatre is full of seedy splendor and grotesque ritual in a deca-dently rococo setting by Farrah that matches Genet's perverse rhetoric. The director, Terry Hands, has used a new transla-tion, by himself and Barbara Wright, based on the original version of the play which has never been performed. It is no less muddled and confused than the more familiar revised version.

Thme has robbed the play of its shock qualities. It merely teases, as with Estelle Kohler's rapturous prostitute Carmen transcendentally identifying herself with the Virgin Mary, or titillates. The bare-breasted Helen Mirren is any fetishist's fancy in tight coreets and high heels.

By John Walker

CONDON, Dec. 3 (IRT).—For filtret time since the street the s the first time since its world come reality, as a paradigm of miere in London in 1957, actual power relationships, is liences can see Jean Genet's hardly enlightening. It is, however, effective in terms of drama and ritual as insignificant figures are transformed into the giant and awesome archetypes of Bishop, Judge and General.

Mr. Hands puts much emphasis on the role of the Chief of Police with his overwhelming desire to become one of the brothel's fantasy figures, a symbol of erotic power. Barry Stanton plays him as an engagingly incompetent buffoon, literally beside himself with glee when his dream comes true, even though it means his death as an individual. The final moments of the play, with the Chief of Police entombing himself in a huge golden mausoleum, effectively reinforce Genet's glittering nihilism.

Charles Dyer writes splendid parts for actors in a rich, adjecand whimsy with acute observa-tion. In his "Mother Adam," which he directs at the Arts Theatre, he is perfectly served by Beatrix Lehmann and Roy Dotrice, both giving performances that ultimately are far more interesting than the play.

"Mother Adam" completes Mr. Dyer's trilogy that began with "Rattle of a Simple Man" and "Staircase"—all dialogues concerning what he calls "the courage and humors of lonely people."

In an attle room, the crippled and arthritic mother lies helpless in bed, her only glimpse of the world coming via a mirror that reflects the view from her window. Constantly watching over the aged relic is her son Adam, appropriately a museum attendant, a shy and middle-oged man totally unsure of everything but his own failure. "The bravest thing I ever did was put out a fire in my inkwell," he says.

She deliberately misinterprets what she sees of the world and concocts tales of her past and of the martyrdoms of members of her large missionary family. He, while suffering a slow martyrtive-stuffed prose that mixes wit dom at her hands, pleads for her credibility gap—this Juliet is 14 and whimsy with acute observa- love, tries to discover the iden—and the scenes with her father tity of his father, and dreams of escape by marriage to a withered spinster who insists that his mother should be put into an old people's home.

Within this restrictive framework there is little room for dramatic development, although finally the mother's fantasies prove stronger than her son's. Mr. Dyer occasionally hints that the play has symbolic overtones, although there are best ignored for the pleasure of enjoying the consum-mate skills of Miss Lehmann, cold-eyed and patient as a vul-ture, and Mr. Dotrice.

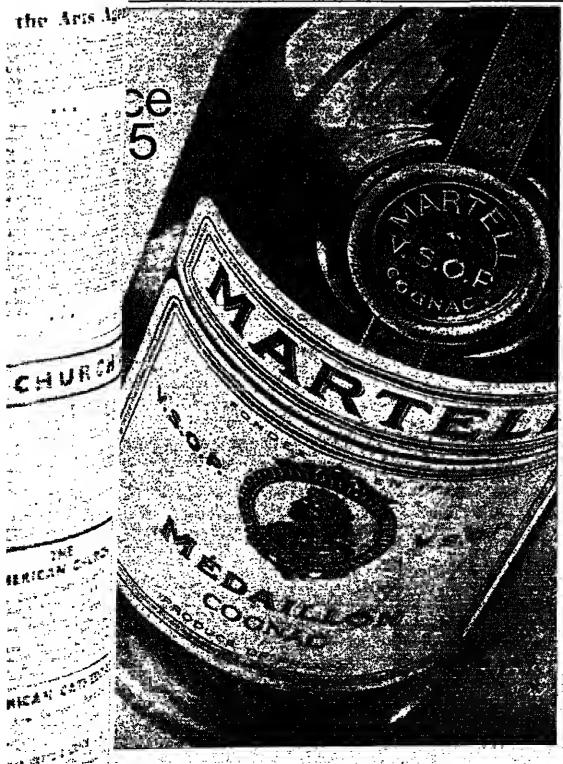

Louise Purnell is giving a remarkable performance as Juliet in Peter James's production of "Romeo and Juliet" at the Young Vic. From her first smirking, pigeon-toed entrance, as she des-perately tries to swallow whatever she is chewing so that she won't have to talk to her mother with her mouth full, Miss Purnell establishes Juliet as a very young, willful girl, slightly spoiled and petulant. For once there is no work wonderfully, full of a baffled incomprehension of one generation for another.

In truth, this approach makes it seem a play about teen-age tantrums rather than tragedy. But the Young Vic way with Shakespeare is to extract as much broad comedy as possible from every situation. The balcony scene becomes a parody of young lovers' meetings, aided by Richard Kay's sardonic Romeo that puts a distance between himself and the words he utters. Paul Brooke's Friar Lawrence seems to have strayed from Robin Hood's Sherwood Forest, while Nicky Henson as Mercutio and Sam Kelly as Benvolio carry on like a latter-day Laurel and Hardy.

This emphasis on comedy makes for some awkward changes of mood when death intrudes. The mainly young audience burst out laughing when Juliet's mother tried to rouse her seemingly dead daughter and there was some giggling even in the final scenes. It is regrettable that the Young Vic seems to confuse seriousness with solemnity.

An Embarrassment of Candidates coming campaign year with more of everything except money. There will be more primary contests and more delegates to the convention, and there already are, have been or are about to be more candidates than at any time in the recent past. Counting once and future contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1972, we have arrived at the awesome figure of fourteen: Harm, Hughes, Bayh, Hartke, Chisholm, Mills, McGovern, Muskie, Kennedy, Jackson, McCarthy, Humphrey, Yorty and Lindsay. We are struck by the fact that of the fourteen nine are U.S. senators, two members of the House, two mayors and none governors, even though the Democrats (especially in the South) can boast some pretty attractive potential candidates in a number of statehouses. It seems probable that, as time goes on, we shall hear a bit more about these. So, even with the prospect of further droponts as the primaries and expenses take their toll, one must regard the already cumbersome list as incomplete.

It is not entirely surprising that there should be a lot of joking about this superabundance of would-be Presidents within the Democratic party, But as David Brodar pointed out in a recent column (IHT, Dec. 3), the perils to the Democrats that proceed from the situation are nnt necessarily those generally snpposed. The time for a party to worry, he observed, 'is when no one seems to want the nomination," adding that the pre-convention candidacy may work as a "vehicle for bringing a certain constituency into the party's affairs, a device for actively involving soveral thousand people" in them. The costs to the party, Mr. Broder concluded. were likely to come in the form of both a drain of funds more sensibly used for the fall election and the infliction of hard-toheal wounds among factions of the party. The cost to the public, he concluded, was likely to take the form of a din of contending voices from which it could become quite impossible to separate out much in the way of a clear signal, much sense of what alternatives to Mr. Nixon's policies the Democrats may be offering.

For the easily forgotten fact is that it is Mr. Nixon and his administration against whom all these Democrats are meant to be running; it is the Nixon administration, not one another, they are seeking—nltimately to replace: And it is as prospective Presidents that they are asking to be judged, not as men who can best manage to appeal to a piurality of Democrats in a 4- or 5- or 6-way elective contest to come, much less of the task of governing that could follow. The point is that even the long stretch of time between now and the election, the multiplicity of would-be candidates and the (which are quite different from those of election-seeking), the emerging internal

> It has happened before in politics; missions are misplaced, objectives forgotten and tactical skirmishes raised to the status of holy war. And this is a process to which we of the press make a singular contribution every four years, helping first to fix public attention exclusively on the cockfighting aspects of the pre-convention contest and then airily and abruptly announcing at some point in the middle of the fuss that nobody is discussing the issues. There are other campaign games that other people play. chiefly the party minions. One, which could be called professional dissatisfaction, has always been popular in Democratic circlesplayers vie with each other to see who can prove least appeasable even when all his demands have been appeased, and the winner gets to holler "Sellout!" Finally, there are word games, which everybody plays. If terms that have been drained of meaning by thoughtlessness and abuse could be eliminated from nur discourse on this subject-hawk, dove, liberal, more liberal, most liberal-it is barely possible that the electorate might gain some idea of what distinctions there are between the contenders and what they are nffering in relation to Nixon administration policies.

Senator Muskle's various position papers have established some sense of the alternative he offers, and so have the statements of Senator McGovern. Senator Jackson. in his remarks so far, has managed to put some very intersting distance between his own and the administration's views on a number of serious issues. Senator Harris, before he drupped out, was notably on the way to fashioning an anthentically radical position in relation to both the administration and his fellow candidates.

But it is not always so easy to perceive or focus on these questions in the minute-by-minute competition, and as Mr. Broder has pointed out, cheap-shot campaigning could easily get more intense, not less, as the candidacies multiply and the primaries wear on. In terms of both unhealable intra-party wounds and insurmountable public boredom and disgust, that seems a perilous course for the Democrats to take. Conceivably, having worked out a structure for preconvention spending among candidates, the Democrats can also fashion some format to bring a degree of order to their combat. For the question is whether, as a collectivity, the party and its myriad candidates will be able to put forth a convention winner who is not, by virtue of what went before, an all but guaranteed election loser. If they cannot, they will already have particular imperatives of nomination-seeking said something about their capacity to

One More Chance in Uruguay

In a record turnout, Uruguay's voters demonstrated emphatically that they have not given up on the country's democratic system and greatly prefer the two traditional parties to a leftist coalition similar to the one now governing Chile. The Frente Ampito (Broad Front), embracing Communists, Socialists, radical Catholics and others, made a respectable showing; but even in Montevideo, where it bad hoped to elect a mayor, the front trailed the governing Colorado party by 50,000 votes.

Liber Seregni, the former army general who ran as the front's candidate for president, thus failed by a wide margin to duplicate the showing that brought Salvador Aliende to the presidency of Chile last year. This will not abort efforts to follow the Chilean pattern in other Latin American countries, but it raises doubts about the widely held notion that Marxist-dominated coalitions are the wave of the future in the

Uruguyans also behaved traditionally in rejecting a constitutional amendment that would have removed the ban on re-election of presidents and thus allowed Jorge Pacheco Areco to run for a second term. But Mr. Pacheco doubtless sees vindication for his tough tactics against the Tupamaro guerrillas and his harsh measures to curb inflation in the fact that his wing of the Colorado party led all the others, His standin candidate, Juan Maria Bordaberry, wili be the next president if the Colorados maintain their lead over the Blanco party.

None of this means that Uruguay has turned the corner in its fight to regain the prosperity and domestic peace that once were the envy of the Americas. The Tupamaros, who had been lying low for several months in an effort to help the Broad Front campaign, will do their utmost to embarrass the government that will take office in March. What the voters have done is tn give one of the traditional parties a new five-year opportunity to transform the country. It may be the iast chance for the Uruguayan democracy.

Money Crisis

The Western world is likely to have new monetary parities when it reawakens, on Monday, December 20. There are reasonable chances-or risks-that on that day the parities of most of the major currencies will be modified in variable proportions. This unprecedented rearrangement of the world monetary hierarchy before the end of the year is not merely a hypothesis. It is a probability after the decision made last night by the finance ministers of the Group of Ten to meet again in Washington Dec. 17-18 . . . If the U.S. agrees to devalue the dollar one way or another as is probable, it is in the Azores that Mr. Nixon will make this major concession... Fear is the beginning of wisdom: the fear of a trade war, of an economic depression has prompted governments to find a compromise without wasting time. This is why the monetary armistice appears nearer than ever today.

PARIS-The recent rise of the price of bread in England has once more directed attention to the highly artificini conditions under which that over-populated country is supplied with foodstuffs in general and with wheat in particular. Great Britain is becoming increasingly dependent upon imported food. It is therefor not only important that England rule the waves, but also that she watch food prices so that they do not go too high in a situation Of crisis.

PARIS-President LaGuardia of the New York Board of Aldermen has adopted as his own a suggestion, not entirely new, for the restriction of automobile speed in cities. He would have city employees affix to every heavy automobile, which by its weight is difficult to control, an apparatus which would absolutely prevent its speed from exceeding a given rate. Something of his sort has already been applied to U.S. Army trucks and with, we might add.

Pearl Harbor 30 Years Later

By James Reston

WASHINGTON.—It is now just 30 years since the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, and Washington and Tokyo are fussing at each other again over money and trade, but the present squabbles should not be exaggeroted. Looking back over this first postwar generation, both countries have behaved very well, and have established a relationship that should contribute to the peace and well-being of the world in the last 30 years of the cen-

Optimism is out of fashion these days, and the latest gloomy headline seems to overwhelm the slow and painful achievements of a whole era, but in the long history of warfare between nations, it is hard to find anything comparable to the generosity of the victors and the spectacular recovery of the vanquished in the 30 years since the end of that savage and tragic war.

One of the amiable characteristics of the American people is that they have no memory. They are not haters. Toey don't nurse their grudges. It must be a surprise to most readers even to be reminded that Dec. 7 is the 30th anniversary of the Pearl Harbor attack, for there is no vengeful spirit in this country toward the Japanese people. For all our foibles and troubles, we are still looking to the future, and while it may be a little prideful to toot our own horn on the point, maybe it is justifiable, for nobody else seems to be dramatizing America's good qualities these days.

Among Giants

The Japanese record since the war is even more remarkable. After all, it is easier for us to be generous in victory than for the Japanese to be patient, industrious and triumphant in defeat. And this is precisely what the Japanese nation has done. Stripped of its territorial conquests, squeezed back with its 100 million people into its limited island space, deprived of natural resources, surrounded by the giants, America, China and the Soviet Union, it has rescued its national sovereignty and integrity, and by almost unimaginable gifts of intelligence, industry and cooperotion it has become the third industrial ration in the world. and certainly the most imaginative ond cooperative human society in the family of nations in the modern world.

tude of the Japanese achievement. They had to take their national life by the throat. They had to control not only industrial and commercial life, but personal life at its most intimate level. They could not sustain a rising population; accordingly, brutal as it may seem, live births in Japan over the postwar generation have been outnumbered by volunteer abortions.

Just as they had too many people, so they had too few raw materials—no minerals to speak of, and no fuel to process them. Yet they created a river of oil tankers from the Middle East -one every 50 miles every hour of the day-and a flood of freighters, with the coal and steel they do not have at bome.

Share Burdens

Washington and Tokyo are arguing with one another now, not because they have failed in their relations over the period since the war, but because they have succeeded beyond the dreams of either capital. Now the problem is to get a successful and competitive Japan to share the common burdens of maintaining peace in the Pacific basin, without reviving its militaristic tradition, without destroying its economic progress, and without destroying its ambitions to be on good terms, not only with the United States, but with the other two major powers in the Pacific, China and the Soviet Union.

It is a very delicate operation, and President Nixon's voyage to Peking in February illustrates the challenge. For it used to be thought that Japan, close to China and the United States, might be able to bring Washington and Peking together in a common understanding of their common problems, but now, ironically, by his imaginative opening to Peking, President Nixon is now in a position to try to bring China and Japan tngether. It will not be easy, for he will have to reassure Chou En-lai that the United States does not want Japan to feel so isolated that Japan has to develop its own nuclear weapons, which it obviously has the scientific and industrial power to do.

The Differences Against this background, the differences between the United States and Japan about the dollar and the yen, and trade restric-tions, and cotton quotas in North Carolina seem very small indeed. U.S.-Japanese relations for peace and progress in the world are far more important, not only for Washington and Tokyo, but for Peking and Moscow as well.

On the 30th anniversary of Pearl Harbor, the understanding of the United States and Japan over the last generation is vital to peace and accommodation with China and the Soviet Union in the Pacific. Washington and Tokyo have demonstrated in the last generation that even the most violent wars between nations . can be composed. The problem now is to avoid narrower differences over money and trade, and try to bring all the major Pacific powers—the U.S., the U.S.R., China and Japan together to create a new nrder in the Pacific.

President Nixon has a real chance here in his February meeting with Chou En-lai. For he has an opportunity, not only to compose the differences between Washington and Paking but to demonstrate on the basis of U.S.-Japanese relations that dramatic new relations can be established for the future in the Pacific despite tragic differences in the Conspiracy theorists on the left of British politics have been trying to find some sinister reason for Lord Goodman's efforts in Rhodesia. They suggest that he is a secret admirer of South Africa or some such thing. The truth is more interesting.

Conspiracy Theorists

Lord Goodman detests racism.

He regards the Africans of Rhodesia as particularly nice people, and he thinks that politics there as elsewhere should be subject to the rule of the majority. The Rhodesian government's practice of holding African leaders in detention for years without trial be-cause of their political aspirations seems to him "horrible."

Now why should a warm-hearted, liberal-minded chap carry on negotiations that he finds so distasteful? How could be agree to a settlement that leaves political power with the white 5 percent of Rhodesia's population for years to come?

Lord Goodman's speech to his peers dealt essentially with these questions. The argument be made has a point, a cautionary point, even for those who would never lose any sleep over Rhod-

Assume that Britain's sole remaining concern in Rhodesis should be for the Africans. The question then is whether it can help them more by signing an agreement that gives them some cconomic, political and social imsettle with Mr. Smith at all. For just about everyone ogrees that Mr. Smith bolds all effective power, that no political force inside or outsida Rhodesia threatens him in the foreseeable future and that he would not accept more liberal terms.

Best Available

Given those realities, Lord Goodman believed the agreed were the best available to Britain. He had no lliusion that he had "persuaded Mr. Smith to a more liberal way of thought." But Mr. Smith, whatever he thought, had made concrete concessions to the outside world's view of minimum decencies in ruce relations.

For Britain to reject the settlement, Lord Goodman therefore concluded, would be to make a moral gesture of no use to the Africans of Rhodesia. Its only purpose, in fact, would be to make the British feet more holy. It would be "self-indulgence."

Any valid politics has to have a moral content in the long run.

moral concern over Rhodesia.

But it is also true that rigid moral certainties, excluding ac-commodation with the facts of life, can have disastrous political effects. The recent history of Rhodesia provides much sad evidence of this truth.

Beginning in the 1950s, successive British governments tried to find a workable compromise between the ideal of multi-racialism and the long-established fact of white power, virtually independent power, in Rhodesia. There were conferences, federa-tions, constitutions one after the

Rejected Formulas

Each successive formula was rejected as insufficiently liberal by African nationalists and sympathetic Britons-and was succeeded by a constitution even less liberal. It all had a terrible inevitability. The angrier the nationalists were. the more they boycotted politics and talked of guerrills war, the more frightened and repressive the Rhodesia whites became.

Many have not learned the lesson of that history even now. For example, some have insisted that Britain should reject the settlement terms because Mr. Smith might not stick to them and they provide no external-British-enforcement mechanism. But the whole lesson of the last futile years is that Britain has no power enforce its will in Rhodesia To make such a promise would be self-indulgent moralizing indeed, and a deception to the Africans.

At Suez 15 years ago the British learned that their military influence in all those pink-colored areas of the map had withered. They would be wise this year to recognize, in Rhodesia, that it would be equally mistaken to try to exercise moral dominion without power.

Nixon Won't Settle War In Vietnam On China Trip

By Stanley Karnow

WASHINGTON .- President Nixon and the Chinese Communist leaders have apparently reached a tacit agreement three months before their summit meeting that they will not resolve the Indochina problem during their Peking conversations.

This does not mean that they will avoid talk about the probiem. The Peking discussions will be "free-wheeling," as White House adviser Henry Kissinger said this week, and thus it is almost certain that the Indochina issue will be raised by both sides.

But the President and the Chinese are now awars, as they have both implied publicly, that they alone cannot bring about an end to the conflict.

Kissinger made this plain in his press conference on Tuesday. "We expect to settle the war in Indochina either through the progress of Vietnamization or di-rect negotiations." he said. adding: "We do not expect to settle it in Peking."

Change of Emphasis

Although Kissinger said essentially the same thing last month. his renewed stress on this point represents a distinct change of emphasis in the motives initially publicized by the White House to explain the President's visit to

On July 15, when he initially announced his dramatic plan to go to Peking, the President voiced the hope that his visit would become a 'journey for peace... not just for our generation but for future generations."

The inference generally drawn from that expression of hope at the time was that the President believed that he could somehow persuade the Chinese to play a role in helping him to reach a settlement in Indochina.

Since then, however, the White House has gradually sought to dispel that hope—for the simple reason that the Chinese bave made it clear in their public pronouncements and possibly in their private conversations with Kissinger that they are neither willing nor chie to compel the Vietnamese Communists to compromise with the United States.

The Chinese have obviously changed their attitude toward the Indochina conflict over the past year, They no longer strive to dissuade the North Vietnamese from negotiating with the United States. Nor do they repeat, as they did until recently. that Hanol and the Viet Cong must keep fighting a "protracted Despite this change in outlook, though, the Peking leaders realize that they lack the leverage to an accommodation with the Nixon administration. This has been apparent during tha past week in the visit of Hanoi's pramier, Phom Van Dong, to China.

'To the End'

The oratory and communiques that emanated from the North Vietnamese leader's visit indicated beyond a shadow of doubt that the Chinese aim was to rcassure him that they have no intention of selling out his country for the sake of a rapprochement with the United States.

The Chinese went on record as saying that they would bock their Communist neighbors "to the end." Moreover, Peking unequivocally supported Hanoi's demands that the United States must totally withdraw its forces from Indochina and scuttle President Nguyen Van Thleu's regime in Saigon.

In the face of China's position on the Indochina question, then, the White House has evidently been forced to backtrack from its original rhetoric lest it raise American aspirations that could not be fulfilled.

By going to China, the President can perhaps accelerate his disengagement from Indochina. since he can argue that the Chinese threat, which was the purported justification for U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia, no longer exists. In that respect. his voyage to Peking is of significant public relations value. But be now appreciates, as do the Chinese, that the road to peace in Indochina posses through Hanoi and Salgon rather than through Poking. And the recognition of that fact, although it offers little cause for optimion. at least shows an understanding of a reality that has exist-Southeast Aria.

Yesterday they were bid up to 5.37 from 5.4 on Wednesday. At the same time, non-residents have been accumulating commercial francs. There is no restriction on buying these francs; documentation that they are being used for legitimate commercial reasons is requested only when payment is made. Today's measures are aimed at forcing non-residents to cash in these accounts before Dec. 10 and discouraging any new inflow. The forced sale of these francs would create a large demand for other currencies, driving their prices up and, conversely, making the tranc appear weaker-which would fit in with the government's policy that there is no need to revalue-

The controls also allow the government to block the surplus in non-resident accounts over and rust prevaned in the account on Nov. 30. There was no immediate explanation of how such sums could be unblocked.

Mr. Giscard d'Estaing also reminded bankers that they are required to retain their Aug. 3 net credit or debit position with non-residents—that is, l'miting the amount of francs which banks can offer to foreigners. U.S. Jobless Rate Rises to 6% in Month

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (UPI). -Unemployment edged up to 6 percent in November, but the number of persons with jobs went past the 80-million mark for the first time in history, the government said today.

The Labor Department said virtually all of the increased joblessness occurred among white young-adult full-time workers who lost their jobs. November was the 13th consecutive month that unemployment has hovered close to 6 per-cent, reaching a high of 8.2 percent last December and again in The jobless rate in October had

Wholesale Price Index Rises .1% During November

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP-DJ).—The wholesale price index edged up by a seasmally adjusted 0.1 percent in November to 114.5 percent of the 1957 average. the Labor Department reported today.

Wholesale prices usually signal trends at the consumer level. The latest increase equaled the 0.1 percent rise in October, the report noted, and followed a 0.4 percent decline in September.

In the three months that roughly corresponded to the Phase 1 freeze, the department said, the index declined at an annual rate of 0.8 percent. On a seasonally adjusted basis, the index for industrial commodities was unchanged from October. Farm products and processed foods were up 0.3 percent and consumer finished goods were down 0.1 percent, the report said. The consumer goods declined was mainly in foods, it added. The unadjusted wholesale price index also rose 0.1 percent.

RAYCHEN AWARDS GOPPEE-RUST CONTRACT FOR EXTENSION TO KESSEL-LO PLANT. Raychem N.V., a Belgian subsidiary of Raychem Corp., Jalif., U.S.A., has awarded Coppée-Rust an engineering contract for the expansion of its heat-shrinkable products plant at Kessel-Lo, near Louvain. The extension will include a fabrication workshop with high-voltage electron-beam generator as well as product development, administrative and commercial offices. The total area to be covered by the existing factory and the new addition will be around 15,000 m2.

Raychem employs radiation techniques to produce heatshrinkable products including "Thermofit" tubes and molded parts, and other specialities such as self-welding

In 1969, Coppée-Rust participated in the realization of the existing factory, which represents an investment of about 75,000,000 B.Fr. Besides the basic engineering, Coppée-Rust performed the detail engineering, procurement and construction management.

Coppée-Rust is jointly owned by Evence Coppée et Cie, of Brussels, and The Rust Engineering Co. of the United States, a division of Litton Industries. It undertakes major contracts in chemicals, pulp and paper, metallurgical and various other industrial fields.

FLANNERY O'CONNOR The Complete Stories

Farrar, Straus & Giroux. 555 pp. $10,

Reviewed by Alfred Kazin

THE title sums up suther, book ruthless as Stephen Cras and life: "Flannery O'Con-nor: The Complete Stories." She died in 1964 at the age of 39; she published 31 stories, of which 12 have been uncollected until now. Now they are all in one book, arranged in chronological order from the stories she wrote for her master's thesis at the University of Iowa to Judgment Day," a harrowing version of her brilliant early story about an elderly Southerner's exile in New York, "The Geranium." Since the stories here include the original openings and other chapters of her two novels "Wise Blood" and "The Violent Bear It Away" and since stories were more natural to her than movels, we do have almost all of Figurery O'Connor "complete" here. Especially when you reflect that the driving characteristic of her style. her mind, her particular faith, was to find people "complete" in the smallest gesture, or in a mo-ment's involuntary action that could decide a life forever.

She could put everything about a character into a single look. everything she had and knew into a single story. She knew peo-ple with the finality with which she claimed to know the distance from hell to heaven. For her, people were complete in their radical weakness, their necessarily human incompleteness. Each story was complete, sentence by sentence. And each sentence was a hard, straight, altogether complete version of her subject: human deficiency, sin, error-ugliness taking a physical form.

She was not just the best "wo-man writer" of this time and place; she expressed something: secret about America, called "the

Her people were wholly what they were, which wasn't much in "humane" terms. But they were all intact of themselves, in their stupidity, their meanness, their puzzlement, their Southern "rurainess." The South was her great metaphor, not for place but for the Fall of Man. Life for O'Connor was made up of absolutes; people were absolute, sharp, knives without handles. Hazel Motes all too believably blinds himself in "Wise Blood." Old Mr. Fortune, in "A View of the Woods, loves his granddaughter so deeply and identifies her with himself so wildly that of course he kills her without meaning to when she amazes him by balking his wishes. The stocky but graceful Miss Proell glided around 25 gates over a distance of 2,400 meters (about one and a half miles) in 1 minute 46.6 seconds to win hy more than a second over Miss Macchi, who finished fifth in last year's Cup.

Miss Macchi was timed in 1:47.89 to finish ahead of Miss Rouvier, who clocked 1:48.13. French coach Jean Beranger wasn't too surprised at what happened today.

Before the race he said he was optimistic for the women's team ("If I wasn't it would really be hard season") and added, "If we don't win we'll place five or six in the top ten." But three was all the French could manage as Michele Jacot, Cup runner-up last year, fell.

Tauber has said since he brought his U.S. women here that "we weren't sleeping" during the off season and quietly said to look out for the two newcomers on the team for today. He was half right. Cindy Nelson, 16, was impressive. She started 47th in the field of 61 which meant that the course, which was fast when the first skiers went over it, was now

But Cindy was off to a flying start and on the first bump she left the ground for 80 feet and later said she "didn't think I'd ever come down."

She did and finished 13th in 1;50.32, four seconds behind Miss Proell who started 43 positions ahead of her. She said she was "pleased" but not completely satisfied. "You can't be completely satisfied if you want to be the best," said young lady from Lutzen, Last year, Miss Nelson was on the U.S. telent squad, which is two steps below the A team. On Sept. 15, she was promoted to the training team "because she was good," said Tauber. In training, she made the major league cir-

The second newcomer, Susan Patterson, also 16, finished 37th today but a bit of nervousness contributed to that.

Finishing ahead of Miss Nelson foday were Sandy Poulsen, ninth, and Karen Budge, 10th. For Miss Poulsen from Olympic Valley. Calif., it was her best downbill finish in a Cup race and her first Cup points in this event. She has two, Miss Proell has 25. Barbara Cochran came home 14th—which surprised her because her specialty is the slalom. Lindy-came in 22d and 43d.

The other surprise today was the eighth-place ending of Betsy Clifford of Old Chelsea, Quebec. The Canadian girl last year vowed that she was finished with the downhill event because she was scared of it. Today's finish helped put an end to her fears.

The same cannot be said of Austria's Ingrid Gfoelner, who took a fall today and broke her left ankle. She will be out several months.

Before the women went the course today, Rogers Little, of Helena, Mont., took a fall in a practice run and sprained some ligaments. His leg will be in a cast for three weeks.

Jets Invade Dallas

Wary Cowboys Await Namath

The Dallas Cowboys, hoping for another chance in the Super Bowl, could come a cropper in Texas stadium tomorrow efternoon against the New York Jets.

Weeb Ewbank, who ran the Jets through an hour-and-a-half offensive drill in chilly, windy Shea Stadium yesterday, said. hope we can beat 'em." Emerson Boozer, the chunky pass blocker for Joe Namath, said, "They can be had."

This will be the first league meeting between the clubs. In preseason games, the Cowboys beet the Jets, 25-9, in 1969, but the Jets won last year, 29-21.

The Dallas statistics are impressive. Currently the Cowboys lead the National Conference in total offense and pass offense, They also have an even more important figure for the Jets to think about. They are fir: (tied with San Francisco) in rushing defense. They have also dropped opposing quarterbacks 35 times.

Personal Challenge

Ken Meyer, coach of the Jet offensive backs, said, "We don't have any special assignments for Dallas. It's a matter of each individual's personal challenge. They've got to keep their opponent away from the quarterback if we're to move the ball."

Boozer, who seemed unimpress ed by Dallas, said, "My responsi-bility is either the middle guard (Lee Roy Jordan) or the outside linebackers, (Chuck Howley and Dave Edwards). It depends on the formation they use."

In addition to those Cowboys the Jet offensive line will have to cope with such front-line stalwarts as Larry Cole, Bill Gregory, the ever-present Bob Lilly and George Andrie.

One thing in favor of the Jets Dallas's pass defense, It is last in the conference, and with the Jets in the capable hands of Namath again, points shouldn't be at a premium.

Individual battles will pit Don Maynard against Herb Adderly at the left corner and Rich Caster against Mel Renfro on the other side. Caster. with Namath throwing, had his hest day of the season last Sunday against the 49ers. with five catches for 126 yards and two touchdowns.

Ali Says Blin Fight On in Zurich Dec. 26

CHERRY HILL, Pa. Dec. 3 (UPI).—Muhammad Ali said yesterday that an acceptable letter of credit has been received from promoters of a Zurich bout with West German heavyweight Juren Blin, and that the fight now is definite for Dec. 26.

"A few minor points weren't exactly right, but the letter of credit is satisfactory, and I will leave for Europe Dec. 20," Ali

Wednesday had been the deedline for the promoters to put up an additional $100,000 of Ali's $250,000 guarantee, and there was no word from Europe, there was speculation the bout might be cancelled.

scorer on the team, with five on 21 receptions for 387 yards. In last year's exhibition game Namath played three quarters with solid results. He completed 10 of 21 passes for 251 yards and two touchdowns, one of them a 73-vard bomb to Caster.

The Jets are fighting for a ,500 ason. Namath, if he remains healthy, could salvage this campaign yet.

In Sunday's action, add Cincinnati and scratch Atlanta on the list of teams scrapping for pro football's eight posts playoff positions. The Bengals, who have won three straight since Virgil Carter returned from a shoulder separation to play quarterback again, meet the Browns in Cleveland and it is big game in the Central Division of the American Conference.

The Browns lead with a 6-5 won-lost record and the Bengals are 4-7, two games back with three to play. In between comes Pittsburgh at 5-6, and fading.

Atlanta's loss to the Minnesota Vikings virtually killed the Falcon hopes of overcoming San Francisco and Los Angeles in the Western Division of the National Conference.

After the Bengals beat San Diego, 31-0, the Charger quarter-back. John Hadl, said: "Cincinnati is the best coached team in pro football. They don't make mistakes. They don't try to do anything they can't do offensive-

Preview of NFL Games

ملذامن الأصل

By William N. Wallace

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (NYT).-The N. Y. Jets' game in Dallas tomorrow afternoon will begin a long weekend of pro football.

There will be five interconference games this weekend. The National Conference has already captured the series—as it did last vear-with 20 victories and two ties in 31 games against American Conference clubs. Here is a preview of the weekend games with won-lost-tied records in parentheses:

SATURDAY

N. Y. JETS (4-7-d) ATDALLAS (8-3-0)—With Walt Garrieon hurting, the Cowhoy running hacks will he Duane Thomas and Calvin Hill, together for the first time. The cornerbacks, Mel Renfro and Herb Adderly, who have been so great this season. must be worrying about Joe Na-math. Betting choice: Dallas by 7 points.

SUNDAY

BUFFALO (1-10-0) AT BALTI-MORE (8-3-0)—The Bills have only a haif-game lead over Houston for last place in the league and the 1972 first draft choice. J. D. Hill their No. 1 this year. is beginning to shine at wide receiver. The best Colt of the season may well be Ted Hendricks, the 6-foot-7-inch linebacker. Betting choice: Baltimore by 17.

CINCINNATI (4-7-0) AT CLEVELAND (6-5-0)-The Bengals have won three straight while the Browns remain shaky after a lineup juggle. Fred Willis, the Bengal rookie fullback from Boston College, has displaced Paul Robinson who won the league rushing title as a 1968 rookie. MIAMI (9-1-1) AT NEW ENGLAND (4-7-0)—Bob Griese, the Dolphins' league-leading quarterback, has a brulsed shoulder but will play. George Mira is his stand-in. Salute Randy Vatahi, the Patriots' 5foot-9 3/4 inch, 170-pound rookie receiver now No. 6 in the conference. Betting choice: Miami by thing like this. "Hello, Mr. President, this is Coach Harold Elkins of the John V. Lindsay High School footbell team. I just wanted to call you and tell you to keep your chin up and don't get discouraged because you've lost a fcw lately."

"Thank you, coach." "The most important thing to remember is that when you're on the five-yard line and you're fumbling, the other guy still has to recover the ball." "I never thought of that, coach.

"Mr. President, my team has lost 39 out of its last 40 games, but I learned one thing. Never give up. You have to say to yourself, "I may be losing the battle for inflation or the economy: or the fight with labor or with Congress, or whatever you're losing at the moment, but I'm going to stick in there and give as good as I get because I'm a pro'." "Those are inspiring words,

National Medal For Literature To E. B. White

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (UPD. -Author E.B. White was awarded the National Medal for Literature vesterday from the National Book Committee for excellence of his total cootribution to the world of lctters.

Mr. White received the prize, $5,000 and a bronze medal, at the annual meeting of the committee at Lincoln Center.

MASHINGTON.—In spite of all something. Mr. President, that he has to do, President you probably don't know about me. I always wanted to go into his busy day to telephone footpolitics. But I wasn't light ball coaches and offer them en- enough to make the team. I played some sandlot politics, and in my freshman year in college I ran for a couple of offices, and so what I tell you now comes not from the heart but from experience.

> "The game of politics is just like the game of football. You win some and you lose some. and you usually lose more than you win. But what counts is not when you're winning and the crowd is cheering, but when you're losing and you're still willing to play. You have that spirit, Mr. President. You've lost a few, but you've never given up, and I admire that in a politician.

"Mr. President, I'm going to go out on a limb and predict that you're going to be in the playoffs in 1972. If Connally can pull off Phase 2, and Agnew doesn't get hurt, and the stock market goes up, and you can block George Meany, and if you can score some points against George Wallace, I believe you're going to be very tough to best." "Coach, I have to ring off

"I want to make one thing perfectly clear, Mr. President. You're going to goof between now and "72-everyone goofs in politics, as in football, but the man who wins is the one who says 'Tve goofed, but I'm still in the ball game'."

"Coach, I've got Chou En-lai

on 'hold'." "Mr. Presideot, do you know what wins football games?" "No, I don't."

"It's team spirit, General Pershing once said that a team with a great morale is nothing if you don't have the spirit to go with it." "He said that?"

"Right. Team spirit is con-tagious. If you, as President, say to your team, 'Let's get them,' it can infect everyone in your administration from the Vice-President of the United States to Henry Kissinger's 10year-old son."

Gold satir evening dress, right, by Charles James, 1934. "I foresaw a new ideal and gave her the appearance of having more bust and a wider pelvis than would have been admired by the average fashionable woman of the early thirties." (From a letter from Charles James, 1971). The picture is from the Cecil Beaton photograph.

The Beaton View of Fashion

PARIS (IET).—Cecil Beatoo has just been in town to buy Christmas gifts. mostly soap, to take some photographs as a wedding present, and to attend the Rothschilds' "Proustian" ball dressed as Nadar the photographer in a velvet jacket, floppy tie, champagne-colored trousers, a large mustache and a tremendous amount of white, flowing hair-"which isn't, as you can see, what I usually wear," says Mr. Beaton, who is smooth and silvery indeed. He was, bn says, terribly impressed with the mauve orchids in the Rothschild jardin Abore all. Mr. Beaton has been in Paris to pick up a box of Balenciaga dresses. chosen by the Master himself, to add to the 26 Balenciagas oo view in the exhibi-tioo devised by Mr. Beaton, "Fashion, an Anthology," which is now drawing huge crowds to the Victoria and Albert Museum in London.

"There's such a wad of people in front of the Royal Family that you can't see Queeo Mary's toques whizzing around." Mr. Beaton says. The show ranges roughly from 1895 to 1971, from Queeo Alexandra to Mr. Freedom, who has 25 itams on show compared to six Chanels and five Saint-Laurents.

"I love Mr. Freedom's nonsense-the jersey with 'God Bless Woolworth's.' the football boots. It's very snazzy and amusing and of today." Mr. Beaton says.

It is quite the thing to have one's clothes in the Victoria and Albert, and directly the project was announced Mr. Beaton was bombarded with offers. Museum staff handled the old ladies with feathered fans and Mr. Beston took care of the rest. "I didn't want to offend more than one or two people, not that there aren't some I don't like to offend."

The list of donors includes the royal family, Miss Nancy Mitford, Twiggy, Lady Diana Cooper, Erté and Mr. Fish, The show is always changing: Mr. Beaton just added the trouser suit worn by the wife of round-the-world sailor Sir Francis Chichester when she met the queen.

"It was the first time the queen has been received in trousers," Mr. Beatoo says.
"It's not the best looking thing I've seen, but I thought it should be in."

The show is not intended as a history of fashion, Mr. Beaton says: "I wanted to try to apotheosize the person who showed indiridualism. It's difficult to do that today because everybody is encouraged to be an individual, but when I was a boy it was considered a little loopy. Those are the people I want to honor."

One example was Queen Alexandra, the wife of Edward VII, the first to wear spangles in the daytime and who, with her tightly-piled hair and tiny, pulled-in waist, resembled a figure from Knossos, according to Mr. Beaton. He would have liked to have had something of Margot Asquith's-"she wore bustles in the '20s"but was unable to find anything.

Nor does he have anything from the important French house of Louise Boulanger, from the late Lucie Rosen of New York who, he says, dressed most picturesquely, or from Daisy Feliowes, a best-dressed figure of the 20s.

Nineteen-tweoties clothes from England were hardest to get, along with snything from the 1940s. "It's almost impossible to get anything from the war period. People were careless about the way they disposed of clothes-it's terrible to seed them to the local pantomime or thrift shop."

Among the visitors to the V&A are many young people with sketchbooks. They especially like Schisparelli. Vionnet ("The cut impresses Ossie Clark and people like that"), Charles James. Dior and Mizza Bricard's Dior hats, nod Balencinga, "He comes out very high," Mr. Beaton says.
"There's a black Balenciaga dress and cape that would be the favorite if a poll were token."

At the end of "The Glass of Fashion" 11954), his first-rate history of fashion through the first half of the 20th century, Mr. Beaton sounded downright disconsolate about fashion's future. His spirits have risen since: He likes today's freedom and anyway, as he sensibly points out in his catalogue to the current show, "We must the arts, even if the world blows up to-We should be like the Duchess of Malfi. and grow fantastical on our deathbeds."

As a recorder of fashion, Mr. Beaton has also been an important influence, though the idea startles him.

"I don't see myself as influencing. I'm terribly surprised when I see something and know the derivation is myself. "My photographs have influenced a lot of people to become photographers, that's true. When I was a boy no one wanted to be a photographer. Now they all do-a photographer or film director."

And if Cecil Beaton were a boy again, would he want to become a photographer? "I wouldn't," he says. "There's too much competition.

PEOPLE: A Question

In 1942, Giuseppe Pichieri, a military policeman from Taranto, wrote to the Italian Ministry of the Treasury requesting indemnity for personal effects lost in the World War II sinking of a troopship. His belongings, he estimated, were worth 100 lire, a tidy sum in those days.

The ministry chose to ignore tha request, but the carabiniere was not easily put off. Over the years, he continued to press his point. The value of the lira was shrinking, it is true, but to Pichieri it was a question of integrity. The treasury, however, continued to disregard his claim. This year, with 100 lire now, worth about 16 U.S. cents, the stubborn Pichieri once more renewed his request for the sum he atill felt was his rightful due. To the veteran's surprise and delight, a letter from Rome, embossed with the Seal of the Ministry of the Treasury, arrived at his home in Taranto.

The answer was 'No."
